

Terms of Use

If you do not agree to these terms you should cease using the website and anything within the website.

The website may change for any reason along with these terms at any time without notice.

Urban Statistic does not take into consideration your personal situation, both in the past, present, or future including your financial position, wants and needs. Prior to any action carried out by you, you should consider your own situation and seek professional advice from a registered or licenced subject expert.

Urban Statistic's 'Scarcity Meter' is a FREE tool used to assess the amount of existing property supply for a location as at the date of issue. The statistical information is for 'general use' and 'educational purposes' only, and you should seek professional advice prior to making any decisions.

The use of the 'Scarcity Meter' is at your own risk and Urban Statistic (including employees or associated parties), gives no warranty nor bears any liability whatsoever regarding accuracy, relevance, date of issue, timeliness, or otherwise to the data.

Copyright in any other third party material that is evident on our website remains the property of the identified third party and your use of that material by you is governed by that third party's terms of use.

All numbers provided are aggregated between multiple data sources. Numbers are indicative only, and are most valuable when used to consider trends over time.

Data from the 'Scarcity Meter' maybe be quoted by 'you' (third party) in free or commercial reports or publications, so long as the data is sourced and a link to the Urban Statistic website is issued.